

Each dot is a representation of a possible input value and its respective output voltage. This information is directly taken from the values given in the array.